Crook Found!!!

Frosh Gives Eye-Witness Account Of Great Event

By JUDY DANTZLER

The day dawned bright and clear on November 15, 1956. It was an ordinary day just like millions before and millions to come, and yet, that day would hold events to alter and illuminate the history of Anderson College.

At about 12:30 p.m. two Froshman girls chanced to meet in the dark hall of the East Wing. They spoke of many things including the recent hiding of the illustrious Crook. They discussed the many nooks and crannies, trees and bushes, and rooms and hallways that had already been searched. Suddenly one of the Fates whispered in one girl's ear of a place that had not been searched. She voiced her new-born idea to the other and it was decided that they go and investigate that place immediately. It was thus that these two walked out into the sunlight with the joy of the hunt throbbing through their veins, not knowing that they were tools of Destiny!

They walked excitedly to the back campus and made their way to the grounds between the main building and the west dormitory. There under the Dean's office window, in the very shadow of Sophomore Hall, they began their Five minutes slipped by but nothing was accomplished. Behind the open windows of the Sophomore Hall dark shadows twitched nervously. An ominous muttering oozed out of the otherwise silent darkness, as the horde of Big Sisters watched their little Sisters hunt frantically for the long-sought Crook.

Suddenly while one Judy Dantzler was on the fire escape, scrounging around amid the ivy, Lillian McGee announced from under the fire escape, “Looky what I found.”

After Judy practically maimed herself for life getting down the fire escape to see the Crook lying white and still beneath Lillian’s trembling hand, she voiced their mutual thoughts.

“We've found the Crook—but now what do we do?” This thought had never entered these sweet chil-
